The Road Not Taken

The Road Not Taken

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, And sorry I could not travel both And be one traveler, long I stood And looked down one as far as I could To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair, And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear; Though as for that the passing there Had worn them really about the same,

And both that morning equally lay In leaves no step had trodden black. Oh, I kept the first for another day! Yet knowing how way leads on to way, I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh Somewhere ages and ages hence: Two roads diverged in a wood, and I— I took the one less traveled by, And that has made all the difference.

Analysis

"The Road Not Taken" is a poem about the choices we make in life. The speaker is faced with two paths and must decide which one to take. He chooses the road less traveled, and this decision leads to a life of adventure and fulfillment.

The poem is full of symbolism. The two roads represent the different choices we have in life. The road less traveled represents the path that is more difficult, but also more rewarding. The speaker's decision to take this road shows that he is willing to take risks and to live a life of adventure.

The poem also speaks to the importance of following our own intuition. The speaker knows that he will never have the opportunity to take the other road, so he chooses the one that feels right to him. This is a reminder that we should trust our own instincts and to make the choices that feel right for us.
