The Steele family has a long and storied history in Steele Ridge, Colorado. They're known for their hard work, their determination, and their love of the land. But they're also known for their wild ways and their reckless behavior.

In Living Fast, author J.R. Ward tells the story of the Steeles, a family that has always lived on the edge. From the patriarch, John Steele, who founded the town of Steele Ridge in the late 1800s, to the current generation, the Steeles have always been known for their love of life and their willingness to take risks.

But the Steeles' wild ways have also taken a toll on the family. John Steele's son, William, was killed in a bar fight. His grandson, Jack, was killed in a car accident. And his great-grandson, Billy, is currently serving a life sentence in prison for murder.

Despite the tragedies that have befallen the family, the Steeles remain a close-knit group. They're fiercely loyal to each other, and they would do anything to protect their family name.
