Sister Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd was an African American woman who defied the odds to become a successful businesswoman and philanthropist. Born into poverty in the rural South, she overcame racism, sexism, and economic hardship to achieve her dreams.

Sarah was born in 1864 in Alabama, just one year after the end of the Civil War. Her parents were sharecroppers, and she grew up in a small cabin with her nine siblings. Despite the poverty of her upbringing, Sarah was a bright and ambitious child. She loved to learn, and she was determined to make something of her life.

At the age of 16, Sarah left home and moved to St. Louis, Missouri. She worked as a domestic servant and saved her money to attend business school. In 1892, she opened her own business, a grocery store. The store was a success, and Sarah soon became one of the most successful African American businesswomen in St. Louis.

In addition to her business success, Sarah was also a generous philanthropist. She donated money to schools, churches, and hospitals. She also founded the Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd Orphanage, which provided a home for over 100 children.

Sarah's story is an inspiration to us all. She showed us that anything is possible if we have the determination to succeed. She was a pioneer for African American women and a role model for all who knew her.

The Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd Orphanage

The Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd Orphanage was founded in 1904 by Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd. The orphanage provided a home for over 100 children, and it was one of the first orphanages in the United States to be founded by an African American woman.

The orphanage was located in St. Louis, Missouri, and it served children of all races and religions. Sarah believed that all children deserved a chance to succeed, and she provided them with a loving and supportive environment.

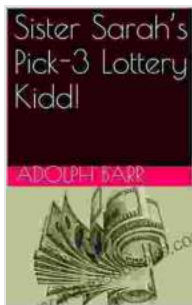

The orphanage closed in 1964, but its legacy lives on. The building that housed the orphanage is now a National Historic Landmark, and it is a reminder of the important work that Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd did for her community.

The Legacy of Sister Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd

Sister Sarah Pick Lottery Kidd was a remarkable woman who left a lasting legacy. She was a successful businesswoman, a generous philanthropist, and a pioneer for African American women.

Sarah's story is an inspiration to us all. She showed us that anything is possible if we have the determination to succeed. She was a woman of great faith, and she believed that all things were possible with God's help.
